People With Superpowers

The world is a strange and mysterious place. Everyday we superordinary people go about our business oblivious to the amazing feats and powers of others.

In this book I shall define and outline some of the superpowers possessed by otherwise normal humans introduce you to those with amazing gifts.

There are some who are entirely unique on the planet and there are those that share a gift such as the ability to communicate with the spirit world.

Apportation is defined as materialization or dematerialization of a person or object. In many ways it is similar to the modern word teleportation.

In the year 858 an incredible hail of stones rained from the sky. This was witnessed by the towns' people of Bingen, Germany. Yet this is not the only recorded event of its kind. There have been over thirty cases of 'hail stones' including in 1682 when boulder size stones came from the heavens in Province, New Hampshire. Of course the Devil was blamed.

Founded in 1875 the Theosophical Society stated that inanimate objects, human beings and other living creatures could be apported. Later we shall read of a soldier who found himself half way across the world.

The Theosophical Society identified certain miracles performed by Saints, Ascended Masters and even Jesus Christ that were accredited to the gift of apportation.

In the nineteenth century there was massive interest in spiritualism.

Almost every seance provided ‘evidence’ of apportation. Tables would rise to the ceiling, cloths would fly around the room as if they had a mind of their own and the spiritualist was often transported from one location to another seemingly in an instant.

Candles, fruit, books and so on would seemingly pass through solid walls and a strange luminescent gloop would become visible. The spiritualists referred to this gloop as ectoplasm.
Ectoplasm was said to be unformed matter that is able to take on any shape.

Poltergeist activity is associated with apportation. Beds, furniture and all manner of objects in the room will be actively flung against walls or rise to the ceiling. In some cases an object or objects will disappear altogether.

In the mid-20th century parapsychologists W.G. Roll and J.G. Pratt suggested that poltergeist activity is recurrent spontaneous psychokinesis (RSPK). They conjectured that it is created entirely by prepubescent teenagers.

Although their research lacked a certain scientific value nevertheless their theory is widely accepted as being the truth. Many believe that the child is possessed by a malevolent spirit that intends serious harm. The poor unfortunate's mind is open to suggestions from the Beyond.

Clara Germana Cele

It is 1906. The sixteen year old Clara Germana Cele is a (Christian) student at St. Michael's Mission in Natal, South Africa. One night Clara told her close friend that she had made a pact with the Devil.

On the following day Clara was unable to enter the local Church. She was ushered into the Church and when confronted with a crucifix she reared up and spat at the congregation. Suddenly Clara began speaking in an unknown language, snarling and foaming at the mouth.

Nuns rushed to her side but she forcibly flung them from her. It seemed she had the power of ten men as first one then many males attempted to physically restrain her.

Two priests were summoned and Clara tried to strangle one of the priests with his stole. As the other Priest tried to pacify her she rose vertically and floated above the heads of the gaping Congregation.

An exorcism was performed. After several hours it appeared that the ‘Demon’ that possessed Clara had been driven out. Yet for weeks Clara maintained that she had the power of prophecy. Hundreds flocked to receive a life reading from this remarkable girl.

The Soldier who Vanished

Gil Perez was a Spanish soldier who suddenly appeared in Mexico City on October 26, 1593. He was wearing the uniform of the guards of the Del Gobernador Palace in the Philippines.

He claimed to have no idea how he had arrived in Mexico. He stated that moments before he had been on sentry duty in Manila at the Governor's Palace. He had just received news of the Governor's (Don Gómez Pérez Dasmariñas)assassination before he was transported. Of course the authorities thought he was a crank and locked him away until they could decide what to charge him with.

Two months later a ship arrived from the Philippines bearing news that the Governor had in fact been killed on the date Perez specified. One of the passengers on the ship recognized Perez and swore that he had seen him in the Philippines on October 23. He was subsequently despatched back to the Philippines. Upon his arrival he faced charges for desertion but several witnesses came forward to confirm that Perez had indeed mysteriously vanished. In fact one eyewitness said Perez had leaned against a wall and in a split second had disappeared.

Vanished Never To Be Found

One of the early inventors of the database is the Microsoft research scientist Jim Gray. On January 8th 2007, aged 63, Jim left San Francisco Bay one morning on his yacht, Tenacious. Having recently cremated his dear mother he intended to scatter her ashes. Her last request was for her ashes to be placed on the ildlife refuge known as the Farallon Islands. That was the last anyone saw of Jim or his yacht.. He left a voicemail for his daughter, Heather that said "I'm taking Granny out to her final resting place. I'm surrounded by dolphins out here. It's a little cloudy but very pleasant. No whales but lots of dolphins and very pretty. Love and kisses, take care, bye."

At 11:50 am, his smartphone synched with Microsoft's email server one last time, pinging a tower south of San Francisco. A couple of hours later, on Southeast Farallon Island, a naturalist named Brett Hartl spotted a sailboat with a reddish hull a mile or two offshore, sailing north. The weather was clear that day and no ships reported striking his boat, nor had the coastguard received a distress signal. Five years later Jim Gray was declared dead.

Jim Gray was a leading light in Microsoft. High tech search and surveillance equipment was used, including satellite and sonar. NASA leant a hand and for three days the area around Farallon Islands was scrutinized. Onshore access to Southeast Farallon Island is restricted.

The Coast Guard had become affiliated to the Department of Homeland Security in 2003.

Is there more to Farallon Island than just seabirds? Did Jim discover something in his work the NSA didn't want him to reveal to the world? Were the coastguard under instructions from their masters to seek and destroy?

Reading the Aura

– Aura is the visible perception of energy fields surrounding people, places and things.

The natural ability to see a colouful halo around living beings seems to be possessed by very few gifted individuals. The ‘body of light’ stands sometimes several metres from and includes the physical body. Dependent upon the colours viewed and where they are found in relation to bodily parts will identify good or poor health or ‘blocks’ in the energy field.

Acupuncture, acupressure, Reflexology and all forms of ancient practices identify this energy field. Some believe it to be the Astral Body. The Chinese refer to it as Chi.

This author was fortunate enough to have worked with a wonderful scientist named Harry Oldfield who has perfected a means of identifying the changes in the human aura.

Harry Oldfield developed a technique he calls Electro Crystal therapy. Using a basic computer and a specially designed piece of software Harry is able to display the aura on a screen. He calls this technique Polycontrast Interference Photography. His research has led him to believe there are 'crystal-dwelling energy entities' that coexist with us on Earth but in a higher dimension. I assure you Harry is a pragmatist with a logical viewpoint to life. We are not dealing with a ‘New Ager’ here. For many years Harry resisted releasing his findings as they do not ‘fit’ with our everyday view of life. Yet particle physics has proven that there are twelve dimensions and multiple universes. All that can possibly exist does exist somewhere in one of the many universes.

In the autumn of 1995 Harry was conducting a scientific investigation into the energy configurations surrounding the psychic surgeon, Stephen Turoff. Whilst Harry examined the healer's energy field a bearded face appeared on the computer screen, smiling at them. Stephen identified this entity as one of his spirit guides - a being from another dimension - captured on scientific equipment. This experiment was later repeated with psychic surgeon Gary Mannion. A similar result was achieved.

The ‘intelligence’ of matter exists as a weak energy shield that permeates living and inanimate matter. We call this energy shield the aura. The aura determines the shape of the living body or inanimate object.

The aura influences the functioning and development of all matter. It has been proven that after death or amputation the aura remains for some time. Stars and planets have an aura.

Think of the aura as a blueprint for the intended so called physical structure and its characteristics.

In the past we either believed or disbelieved those who claimed to be able to see a person’s aura. It is now possible with the use of a computer interface to see the aura with the physical eyes. The scientist Harry Oldfield has developed a method he terms

Harry Oldfield, inventor, scientist, thinker and seeker after new and forgotten knowledge is an explorer of undiscovered realms. One of Harry's main developments has been a photo-imaging system that reveals the human energy field (aura). This has become known as PIP which stands for Polycontrast Interference Photography.

In the autumn of 1995, he was conducting a scientific investigation into the energy configurations surrounding the well-known psychic surgeon, Stephen Turoff. While he was examining the healer's energy field, a face with a beard appeared on his computer screen and smiled at him. This was one of Stephen's spirit guides, a being from another world, another dimension, captured by scientific equipment. This has been repeated with young psychic surgeon Gary Mannion.

A major feature of this imaging technique is that bacteria, cells and other micro-organisms can be studied in a living, moving state, without the need for staining - and thus killing - the specimen.

KIRLIAN PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ENERGY FIELD

POLYCONTRAST INTERFERENCE PHOTOGRAPHS

In general science has provided almost no information regarding the aura and related aspects of energy such as the etheric and astral bodies and chakras. In fact along with astrology (which we shall see in book two is enormously important) scientists have expended energy deriding and ridiculing what they cannot perceive. Latterly however science expects us to believe their tales of multi dimensions and ‘full space’.

Perhaps from hereon in we need to progress with at least an open mind. I do not expect you to take at face value everything I state in this and the second book. What I would ask is that (like mainstream science) you do not instantly dismiss the possibility that there is more to the universe than meets the eye.

THE ICEMAN

Wim Hof is aptly named the Iceman. To prove his incredible resistance to low temperatures he ran a half marathon in the Arctic Circle in temperatures below -20 degrees. He ran shirtless and barefoot for five hours, twenty five minutes.

Hof also climbed Kilamanjaro in 2 days wearing nothing except black shorts. Not content with proving his ability to withstand extreme cold in unforgiveable climates Wim frequently immerses himself for hours in a bath of ice. His record currently is one hour thirteen minutes and forty eight seconds.

Automatic Writing

– Words and pictures that do not originate from the conscious mind of the automatic ‘author’. Frequently engineered by placing the subject in a trance state.

Automatic writing is used in Freudian psychology. This was used to gain insights into the subconscios mind. Most famous automatic writers were Pierre Janet (French) and Americans Morton Prince and Anita Muhl.

Channellers (said to communicate with the spirit world) often use automatic writing. It is prevalent in spiritualism and the New Age movement.

Helene Smith (20th century psychic) stated that she was channeling Martians who wished to communicate with humans through her.

Andrea Breton (Surrealist) was one of the pioneers of this strange method of communication. She was named the muse of automatic writing.

Amazing Strength

Born in Germany in 1999, known to doctors as Uberboy is a youith who has defied medical science. From birth he had super developed musculature.

At the age of five he easily held weights each weighing 4 kilos with arms outstretched. His grandfather also possesses enormous strength and scientists constantly examine both the boy and his grandfather. They hope to discover a mutant gene that may lead to the development of super strength for more of us in the future. Uberboys' secret identity is maintained. Perhaps his real name is Clark.

If Superbaby is from the planet Krypton are there more people with superpowers much like those we read about in Marvel and DC comics?

Talking of superheroes there is a real live aquaman, living in New Zealand:

Dave Mullins is capable of swimming underwater for not only record amount of time, but also record distance. In September 2007, Mullins shattered his own record when he swam underwater for 4 minutes 2 seconds, swimming a total distance of 244 meters with a single breath. Mullins, whose specialty is free diving, set a New Zealand record in April 2008 when he dove 108 meters with no oxygen tank or specialized equipment. He's only the fifth man in New Zealand to reach a depth of 100 meters. Mullins trains his muscles to work while deprived of oxygen. This allows him to swim further and longer, but also leads to a build-up of lactic acid in his leg muscles.

The 2009 title of Britain's strongest youth went to Chris Morgan. Weighing a mere 107 Kilos and standing six feet tall this strapping lad is able to carry a Ford Fiesta on his back. Yet Chris weighed only 5lbs 5 oz at birth.

Nine year old Yang Jinlong from China is so strong he is able to lift two bags of cement then carry his father just as a warmup to the real event.

In Chuzhou, where he lives with his parents, Jinlong frequently demonstrates his ability to pull a 1.85 ton van along the street watched by impressed onlookers.

Eidetic or photographic memory

Kim Peek was able to remember every detail of everything he read. Ask him to answer a question found in any on e of the 12,000 books he had read and his answer is accurate and immediate.

His amazing ability inspired the making of the film Rainman. Sadly Kim passed away in 2009.

Some Like it Hot, Some do Not

The Himalayas present an inhospitable environment. Temperatures rarely exceed 0 degrees Celcius. Tibetan monks have developed the ability to increase their body temperature by up to 8 degrees Celsius. The Dalai Lama demonstrated this ‘common’ ability amongst Tibetan monks at Harvard University. American researchers then travelled to Tibet where they conducted extensive experiments on a number of adepts.

On several occasions the monks would douse themselves in freezing water – all the better to demostrate their power over the elements. This process is an initiation for all Tibetan monks.

They must sit perfectly still high in the Himalayas (exposed to fierce wind and rain) for hours whilst having freezing water poured over their naked body. Temperatures average -17 C.

Apparently the process works by slowing the blood flow to the brain, thus providing it with less oxygen. Somehow this method is able to invoke a raised temperature no matter what the external conditions. Personally I find this explanation not at all satisfactory. Let us say it is a triumph of mind over matter.

Faith Healing

Defined as the diagnosis and cure of diseases through religious devotion. The healer calls upon the power of prayer to heal the afflicted. In many ways this mirrors the works of Jesus Christ and many other religious prophets and sages. In fact the ‘belief’ is perhaps the most important aspect of the process. Both healer and ‘patient’ must believe that the healing is genuine.

There are many documented cases of healing, a good number of which have no bearing on formal religious practices. I personally believe we all have the ability to heal ourselves and others. After all the biological entity we call human is largely composed of electromagnetic energy, without which the body would be unable to be animated.

Individuals who possessed a power of gift were feared by the Roman Catholic Church so for centuries such people were burned at the stake or drowned. They were deemed to be witches.

The laying on of hands is not the only process by which healing occurs. I have previously mentioned Harry Oldfield who uses an electro crystal therapy machine to heal. Nikola Tesla had also invented a machine that could rebalance the energies of the body.

Both Samuel Hahnemann and Dr. Edward Bach developed unique forms of medicine that had almost miraculous effects not only upon the body but on the mind and psyche.

Hahnemann's Homoeopathy proved to be invaluable in the West but has seriously been 'hounded' by the Pharma Companies in recent years. Infinitessimely tiny amounts (less than a molecule) of a substance that ordinarily would create a physical condition are employed to 'cure' the same condition. Think of 'hair of the dog' cure for a hangover. Amongst the remedies employed in Homoepathy to good effect are Deadly Nightshade, snake venoms and Arsenic. The philosophy of Homoeopathy is Similia Similibus Curantur – like treats like.

Dr. Edward Bach was single-handedly responsible for developing a vaccine for the dreadful influenza that gripped Europe following the First World War. He is even more famous for developing thirty eight flower remedies that treat mental and psychological conditions.

Each of the 38 remedies discovered by Dr Bach is directed at a particular characteristic or emotional state.

Dr. Bach studied medicine at the University College Hospital, London and obtained a Diploma in Public Health at Cambridge. He was a house surgeon and a casualty medical officer at University College Hospital. He worked at the National Temperance Hospital and practiced for over twenty years in London as a Harley Street consultant and bacteriologist.

After research in immunology, he developed an interest in homeopathy, and joined the laboratories of the Royal London Homeopathic Hospital in 1919. He developed seven bacterial nosodes (the seven Bach nosodes), which have received only limited recognition.

Despite the success of his work with orthodox medicine he felt dissatisfied with the way doctors were expected to concentrate on diseases and to ignore the people who were suffering them. He turned to alternative therapies. He believed that illness is the effect of disharmony between body and mind.

Symptoms of an illness are the external expression of negative emotional states. In 1928 he began work on his own remedies made from plants. At the age of forty-three (1930), he gave up his lucrative Harley Street practice and left London in order to concentrate on finding a new system of healing involving plant remedies.

He was sure a new system of medicine could be found in nature and so he left to work in Wales and the English countryside. In spring and summer he discovered and prepared new herbal remedies, and in winter he treated patients for free.

By 1932 he had discovered the first of his 12 remedies. These he used on the many patients who came to him for treatment.

Astral Projection

Defined as an oob (out of body) experience this amazing talent allows the possesser to travel in the astral plane. There are seven states of the astral (similar to the physical states of solid, liquid and gas). Physical matter is thought to ‘float in a sea’ of the astral. The astral body (like the emotional body) resides in the same ‘space’ as the physical, atmic and ethereal bodies. In fact we are interdimensional beings of infinite consciousness presenting Itself in an infinite number of forms.

The ability to apparently disconnect the astral body from the physical is known as astral projection. I have had such an experience as have many individuals throughout the world. The astral body is rarely seen through physical eyes but it is possible that another person will view you whilst in your astral body.

There are techniques to master oobes. Meditation and relaxation in combination with ‘switching off’ the mental processes are paramount.

When first experiencing astral projection the ‘student’ finds themself floating to the ceiling or through the floor. Often the person instantly returns to the physical body as they feel this experience is too unbelievable. Further attempts are generally far more successful until eventually the astral body is treated as if it were a floating physical body. Now you may go wherever you wish.

Some near death experiences are in fact the astral body separating from the physical.

Two totally different experiences of astral projection are detailed below:

A typical astral projection story is told by Angie Christie:

Margaret and John live in a village in Suffolk in England. For years they were friends with their neighbours, Jim and his wife. Unfortunately Jimmy's wife passed away in 2008.

The event took place on 14th May 2011. Jim is a ninety year old widower.

I must describe Jim's apparel. He was wearing a grey sweater with stripes and grey trousers. John had finished cutting the hedge then went indoors and Jim was standing at his back door talking to Margaret. After finishing their conversation they both went into their respective houses.

Some time later Margaret looked up from the book she was reading to see Jim leaving his house. Apparently he had changed his clothing, now being dressed in a black sweater and black trousers. One thing puzzled Margaret – there was no sound. Ordinarily Jim's back door and garden gate made a loud noise when closing. This concerned Margaret for some reason and she asked her husband to follow Jim to see if he was ok.

John saw no sign of Jim on the street. When he returned home Margaret begged him to knock on Jim's door to check on Jim due to his advanced age. A debate ensued:

"If he has just left his house what point is there in me knocking on his door?"
"I have a strange feeling something is not right"

“Look he normally takes a nap at this time in the afternoon I don’t wish to disturb him. Anyway you told me he has just left his house”

“All the more reason to check on him”

“Alright, alright but it seems crazy to me”

Reluctantly John knocked on Jim’s door. There was no reply.

After several minutes of intense conversation Margaret again persuaded her husband to return to Jim’s house this time with their spare key Jim had insisted they possess.

After repeatedly knocking on Jim’s front door John eventually let himself into the house. He called Jim several times. He received no response.

John climbed the stairs and peeked into Jim's bedroom. The ninety year old seemed sound asleep. Having received instructions from Margaret to ensure Jim was ok John approached the bed. He could not rouse Jim. He felt for a pulse. There was none.

The medical staff were called. When they arrived the doctor pronounced Jim dead, 24 hours earlier.

Angela Marie Adkinson wrote:

One day last year I woke at 6 am. I got up, got dressed, ate breakfast then went outside to take out the trash. It seemed much darker than it should be for that time in the morning. I went back inside, looked at the clock. It was 6:43.

I finished washing up and some other chores noticing that I was more tired than usual. By this time it was 6:55. Time seemed to be going too slow so I checked other clocks. Sure enough it was 6:55.

All this time my dog had been looking at me and whining.

I watched a little television which strangely were late night shows.

Then I noticed my dog was still whining and looking strangely at me. Then he startled me by barking right at me.

I felt my whole body convulse and as I closed my eyes for a split second I was suddenly sitting on my bed fully dressed. My dog was also in my bedroom yet one second before we had been looking at the television in the lounge.

I looked at the clock. It was 6am.

Debora Carpenter’s experience:

Many years ago I was driving home from work. I had to stop at traffic lights in Andover, Massachusetts. I glanced down at the radio to check the time then as I looked up again everything in front of my eyes was changed. The road was now just dirt. I saw people in really old-fashioned clothes walking past me and I could smell horse dung.

I heard and saw a black buggy pass close by me pulled by two horses. A woman and her husband were in the buggy and I heard them speaking. Then in a split second it was over.
A car horn startled me and I looked to see I was back in the present and the lights were on green.

Erin Pavlina writes:

It was January 7th, 1985. On that night something amazing, frightening, and most intriguing happened to me. It was the night I had my first astral projection.

To preface this experience you should know that I am a fairly advanced lucid dreamer. I had learned how to maintain my consciousness while asleep and in a dream. I was so good at it that I could literally pre-program a dream and have it once I was asleep. My night life was a lot of fun.

I'd been reading about astral projection and had been attempting to do it for 3 years with no success whatsoever. So it was, on this night, that it happened. It was nothing like I expected, which could be why I was unsuccessful for 3 years. Here's what I experienced.

I awakened to find myself in bed with an intense tingling taking place in my body. There was a high pitched sound in my head. The tingling almost felt like an electric shock but not painful, just extremely uncomfortable. I could feel that my eyes were closed yet I could see.

I was experiencing a dual consciousness that was unlike anything I'd ever experienced. I could feel my body and also my "self" at the same time and they were not the same.

I felt my spirit (for lack of a better word at this point) moving slowly out of my body. It was as if the tingling electric feeling was almost driving me out. But there was something else. I sensed the presence of three others in the room. I couldn't see them, I just knew they were there. I was so scared to be feeling this separation that I tried to move, scream, anything to break the spell. I was unsuccessful. I even felt like I was choking as I tried to make my body's mouth scream while my entire consciousness was in my spiritual body.

I heard a voice in my head say, "Breathe through your nose. It will be easier." Trusting this voice, I did just that, and to my horror I started moving out of my body much faster! I can't tell you the terror of feeling yourself leave your body for the first time. It's the most unnatural feeling you could experience while alive.

Feeling betrayed by the voice, I stopped breathing through my nose and started trying to scream again. I started moving back into my body. But another force drew me out again. My spirit was in a tug of war with me trying to get back into my body and these presences trying to pull me out.

This tugging back and forth went on for what felt like a few minutes. I heard one of the other voices say, “This isn’t going to work. She’s too frightened.” The third voice responded, “She’s got to learn one way or the other.” The first voice said to me, “It’s okay, let it happen.”

I pulled as hard as I could to get myself back into the comfort of my shell. And succeeded. I opened my body's eyes. I could still feel the tingling. Before I could sit up I felt myself pulled back down into a “sleep” state and the tug started all over again.

I sincerely thought these entities were trying to disconnect me with my body and that I would die if I left it. It was such a primal feeling.

This in-again, out-again tugging went on for about 10 minutes. The next time I found myself fully incorporated into my body I sat up, turned on the light and had a nervous breakdown. What the Hell was that? I thought to myself. I sat in bed crying because I was too afraid to go back to sleep. I stayed that way until morning.

I decided not to tell anyone in my family what had happened because I didn’t think they’d believe me. I got dressed for school and went on about my morning but I could not think about anything else. When I got to school, I ran into my boyfriend and before I could tell him any of my tale he said, "Hey, I tried to contact you psychically last night, but I guess it didn't work." (He was into this stuff too)

I started beating him on the chest and crying. I said, "No no! Something did happen!" And I told him everything. We spent the day trying to figure out what had happened.

We reluctantly came to the conclusion that the entities were probably evil and were trying to kill me or take possession of my body. That was truly unfortunate because this assumption led to a series of events which initially shaped all of my astral experiences in a negative way.

The next 7 days after that experience I had 3 more occurrences like the first. I got to the point where I was terrified of going to sleep because I knew “they” would try to take me again.

Thus began my experiences with astral projection, “evil” entities, and a four-month long battle with a demon that I will never forget.

Time Travel

Paul Roberts received a tip from HPI paranormal investigator Nancy Towne. She told me of a man who had made a time machine. He called it a Hyper Dimensional Resonator. The HDR is able to transport anyone through time either physically or astrally. I had heard of Steve Gibbs (from Coast to Coast AM) who also professed to own a time machine.

Apparently time machines disrupt electromagnetic waves as the Philadelphia Experiment had.

In all such cases the space-time continuum is disrupted. I am told you are able to travel to other dimensions.

This guy told my friend that (using dowsing rods) a dimensional vortex must be located. Wearing a special headband and sitting in or near the machine the machine is now operated.

It works by telepathy. Think where and when you want to be then you will go there.

This particular machine has a witness well that maintains the identity of the headband wearer whilst they travel in time.

Steve Gibbs claims his time machine was created by a time traveller from the future.

An example of time travel is The Versailles Time Slip:

Anne Mobberley and Eleanor Jourdain were walking in Versailles when a sudden mist descended. As it cleared they found themselves back in time to a period before the French Revolution. They witnessed wealthy people walking in the gardens all dressed in period clothing. Yet nobody noticed them.

It was as if they were phantoms. Any attempt to strike up a conversation proved impossible and it was as if people looked straight through the two ladies.

The experience lasted for about half an hour then the mist descended once again. As it cleared they found themselves in their familiar time.

ANDREW BASIAGO

The American lawyer Andrew Basiago lectures on his childhood experiences where he says he took part in time travel experiments guided by his fatherr. Andrew's father was Raymond F Basiago (Engineer for Curits-Wright Aviation at Woodridge in the 1950s to 1970s).

He was asked to volunteer his son for time travel experiments. Andrew was one of dozens of children placed into a specially prepared capsule to partake in travels through time.

Andrew states with conviction that from the year 1967 he was periodically transported from one locale to another both on and off our planet both backwards and forwards in time.

We already live on Mars

Andrew Basiago claims to have been transported to Mars where he visited a colony the U.S. Military are extablishing there. On the first occasion he was only four years old. Prior to the ‘jump’ to Mars his father Raymond read from a Manilla file issued by the CIA which purported to be from the year 2008 written by no other than Andrew himself – over 40 years in the future. Later his father would show him a photograph of a Martian.

Teleportation would generally occur from building 68 of the Curtis-Wright Aeronautical Facility in Woodridge New Jersey to Los Alamos, New Mexico. The ‘journey’ would generally take approximately thirty seconds.

On a special occasion in 1970 Andrew was taken to a remote hanger where he witnessed a tear drop shaped space craft and was introduced to the pilot and crew who had flown from Mars. The beings were essentially human but with highly pitched voices.

The major difference between Martians and humans is the domed forehead. These ‘spacemen’ wore a red spacesuit emblazoned with a yellow lightning bolt on the chest. At this meeting there was an agreement for the Martians to share their advanced aeronautical technology.

In 1971 on Halloween night Andrew was sick in bed. His father entered Andrew’s bedroom then presented Andrew with a paper entitled ‘Life on Mars’. The paper was written by Andrew himself in the year 2009.

In 1972 Andrew's family moved to California. From 1980 Andrew studied at UCLA. He was assigned a mentor - Courtney M Hunt - who attempted to recruit Andrewinto the CIA.

Andrew 'jumped' through the stargate at the Convention Centre in Santa Fe to the year 2045. He brought back to the radio microwave tower in South West Colorado microfilmed canisters. The film provided details of world events that would enable the Defence Department of the USA in present time to prepare for certain disasters that would occur in the forseeable future.

Andrew states that Donald Rumsfeld was attached to Project Pegasus. He was in a senior position and was one of the officials who wished the children engaged in PP to continue to time travel during adulthood, despite there being danger to the individuals.

DARPA had five reasons for involving American school children in such new, dangerous, and experimental activities.

1. The Department of Defense wanted to test the mental and physical effects of teleportation on children.
2. Project Pegasus needed to use children because the holograms created by the chronovisors would collapse when adults stood within them.
3. The children were tabula rasa and would tend to see things during the time probes that adults would tend to miss.
4. The children were trainees who upon growing up would serve in a covert time-space program under DARPA that would operate in tandem with the overt space program under NASA.
5. The program sponsors found that after moving between time lines adult time travelers were often becoming insane. It was hoped that by working with gifted and talented children from > childhood the US government might create an adult cadre of "chrononauts" capable of dealing with the psychological effects of time travel.

Andrew Basiago talks of his father participating in the development of jet engines in an attempt to capture UFOs.

Tim Cridland, better known as Zamora, has been a sideshow phenomenon for decades, able to perform such tortuous tasks as skewering his lower jaw with a sharp rod by sticking it in his mouth and out below his chin. He's also able to cut into his torso to retrieve recently swallowed items. He insists that he's able to perform these tasks through a Zen-like approach that allows him to transcend pain.

Bilocation

– the ability to be in two or more places simultaneously.

Pythagorus possessed this ability. Students testified that they would converse with him and yet he was lecturing to another group of students at the same time.

The Abbess of the Franciscan convent in Agreda, Spain named Sour Maria Coronel was also a bilocator. Testimony from eyewitnesses prove her presence in Mexico whilst she was simultaneously undergoing her duties at the Abbey in Spain.

X-Ray Vision

10 year old Natasha Demkina discovered that she was able to see through her mother's body. She amazed doctors by describing the shape and position of all the organs in her parents' bodies.

When asked to repeat her amazing gift she proved time and again in front of medical teams that she did indeed possess X-ray eyes.

For years Natasha diagnosed medical conditions from her home in Saransk, Russia. There were those in the medical profession that were still sceptical. One such doctor arrived in Saransk and insisted Demkina ‘look into his body’. He was shocked when she described a stomach ulcer he later discovered to be present in the exact place she had indicated.

She was flown to England where once again medical staff were shocked by her incredible superpower. Demkina described multiple injuries that one of the doctors had received in a severe car crash.

Sergeant Sonar

Have you heard of echolocation? This ability is possessed by bats. Despite the fact they spend most of their time in the dark they are easily able to fly without hitting objects or cavern walls. Ben Underwood is like Batman or more precisely Daredevil.

His story begins in an extremely tragic manner. At the age of two Ben was diagnosed with retinal cancer. Doctors had no choice but to remove his eyes entirely. The alternative was a slow and agonising death.

By the time he was five years old Ben was able to behave as if he was fully sighted. Parents and family were astounded when the child showed that he could avoid contact with dangerous objects and find his way from one room to another with ease.

After some time he was able to explain that he had developed a technique that enabled him to detect where everything around him was situated. Ben stated that he employed clicking noises with his tongue and thus his developed sense of hearing would pick up an ‘echo’ from surrounding objects. He had quickly learned where, how big, how far away and just what these objects were.

The photograph above is Ben atop a fire hydrant. He currently enjoys rollerblading, skateboarding, playing basketball, football. His favourite pastime is computer games.

Buddhist monk can cause a ball to levitate then catch fire:

After hovering there for a few seconds, the ball burst into flames

Tetrachromacy

Humans are normally trichromats, having three types of cone cells that receive light from either the red, green, or blue part of the light spectrum. Each cone can pick up about 100 graduations of color and the brain combines colors and graduations so that there are about 1 million distinguishable hues coloring your world.

Tetrachromacy is the ability to see light from four distinct sources. An example of this in the animal kingdom is the zebrafish (Danio rerio), which can see light from the red, green, blue, and ultraviolet sections of the light spectrum. There are humans who have this amazing ability.

A true tetrachromat with an extra type of cone between red and green (in the orange range) would, theoretically, be able to perceive 100 million colors.

Chimeras

A Chimera has the body parts of two or more different species. It is most often part human. Although this ‘beast’ seems to be borne from myth there is evidence that Chimera actually existed anda re being created in the present. The sinister area 51 and DULCE bases are said to house hybridised human, animal, alien Chimera deep underground. This evidence points to alien greys guiding the American military to fashion advanced weapons in war in exchange for human abductees. The abductees are imprisoned against their will as their very genetic maekup is ‘tinkered with’ to create grotesque hybrid species.

Quote from The Telegraph2nd July 2013:

Dr Sergio Canavero believes that the technology now exists that will allow surgeons to carry out the Frankenstein-style procedure, which has been tested out on animals since 1970.
Up until now there has been no way to successfully reconnect the spinal cord, leaving the subjects paralysed from the point where the transplant was connected.

Recent advances have meant that re-connecting the spinal cord is now possible, and it is believed that the breakthrough means that previously fatal diseases could be cured.

However, other experts have dismissed the idea.

Professor Anthony Warrens, from the British Transplantation Society, told the Sun: "Connecting a head to a body is worthless to human beings today. The whole concept is bizarre."

In 1970 Robert White successfully transplanted the head of a rhesus monkey onto the body of a second rhesus, and Dr Canavero, a member of the Turin Advanced Neuromodulation Group, has proposed using a similar method.

He said: “The greatest technical hurdle to such endeavour is of course the reconnection of the donor's and recipient's spinal cords. It is my contention that the technology only now exists for such linkage,” he wrote.

“It is argued that several up to now hopeless medical conditions might benefit from such procedure.”

He believes that it a team of 100 could perform the operation in 36 hours — at a cost of £8.5million.

Both heads would have to be removed at the same time, and reconnected within an hour.

"This is no longer science fiction. This could be done today — now. If this operation is done it will provide a few people with a substantial amount of extra life," he said.

"The only reason I have not gone further is funding."

However, Dr Calum Mackellar, from the Scottish Council on Human Bioethics, added:

"This sounds like something from a horror movie."

Neurosurgeons are optimistic about the theoretical possibility of a human brain transplant. It is conjectured that should transplantion of one's brain into another's body be possible your personality and characteristics would remain the same (barring the trauma of waking up and discovering your body had been burned with other medical waste).

Your essential self does not change. Despite some in the Illuminati and of course the wonderful Walter Disney wishing to become immortal it appears that even our brain gets tired and worn out. Yes sorry folks the brain does age.

Hybridisation

So what do we do whilst waiting for a new brain? Why we tinker with our DNA to discover whether it is possible to create a superbeing. There is scant (yet some) evidence that indicates the American Military (with the help of their tall grey friends) are abducting humans (100,000 Americans per annum) for hybridisation. What is hybridisation? The combining of two or more species. When put like that it sounds harmless enough. Scientists cloned Dolly the sheep and she was ever so beautiful wasn't she? Well look at her she's my kinda girl. Suit yourself.

Phtographic evidence of Chimera in recent times is portrayed below:

Synesthesia

This is a rare condition that muddles the senses yet is kinda groovy. People with synesthesia ‘taste’ words and ‘see’ numbers as colours. For example five is green and city tastes of gravel.

We could have lots of fun experimenting with this ‘gift’ but those who possess it are often viewed as odd or quirky.

Many tests have been performed on those with colour synesthesia to establish that they do indeed see numbers as colours. This ability enables them to remember extremely long numbers including Pi to the 25th decimal place.

There is an extremely rare form of synesthesia whereby the synesthetic perceives musical tones as colours. Of course the brain is an amazing mechanism and who is to say what is ‘normal’ and what may prove to be a special ability.

Too Right Brained

An American neuro scientist suffered a stroke to the left side of her brain whilst exercising in her home gym. She looked at her fingers (which she entirely felt disassociated from). They appeared to her as long claws. For hours she sat staring at her open address book. The telephone numbers appeared as musical notes, preventing her from recognising valuable emergency numbers.

As the stroke progressed she felt enormous, realising she was not trapped in a physical body but rather she was the size of the entire universe. All knowledge was hers to 'tap into' yet it seemed irrelevant beside the feelings of bliss and euphoria that enveloped her.

At times the damaged left brain 'woke up' for short periods. It warned her that she was seriously ill and must seek help. Objects in her home were largely unrecognisable yet she managed to identify her telephone (as a living serpent). In a lucid moment she dialled the number of a close friend – the action of doing so took over twenty minutes.

Eventually there was a barking dog on the other end of the telephone line. Her left brain informed her this was the voice of her friend. When she cried for help she heard her own voice – it sounded like a feline.

The friend and emergency services did arrive and she was transported to hospital. She was diagnosed with a brain aneurysm.

Months later when she had made an almost complete recovery she stated that part of her (the right brain) yearned for that experience to return. She felt trapped in logic and order.

Daniel McCartney, Salo Finkelstein, Daniel Tammet and Alexander Aitken all have one thing in common. There are superhuman calculators. This extremely rare superpower provides the superman with an ability to instantly calculate incredibly difficult multiplications or divisions without apparently any effort. Some are termed autistic savants and a handful have suffered a head injury that left them with this incredible power. Once again the brain proves that it has hidden properties. Perhaps we all have superpowers waiting to be unleashed.

Stephen Wiltshire

Stephen Wiltshire MBE Hon FSA (born 24 April 1974) is a British architectural artist. He is known for his ability to sketch, entirely from memory, a landscape after seeing it just once. He is internationally acclaimed. Below are just a few examples of his amazing work:

Geniuses

Anne Louise Germaine Necker

Baroness de Stael-Holstein was French-Swiss was one of Napoleon's principal opponents. Celebrated for her conversational eloquence, she participated actively in the political and intellectual life of her times. Her works, both critical and fictional, made their mark on the history of European Romanticism.

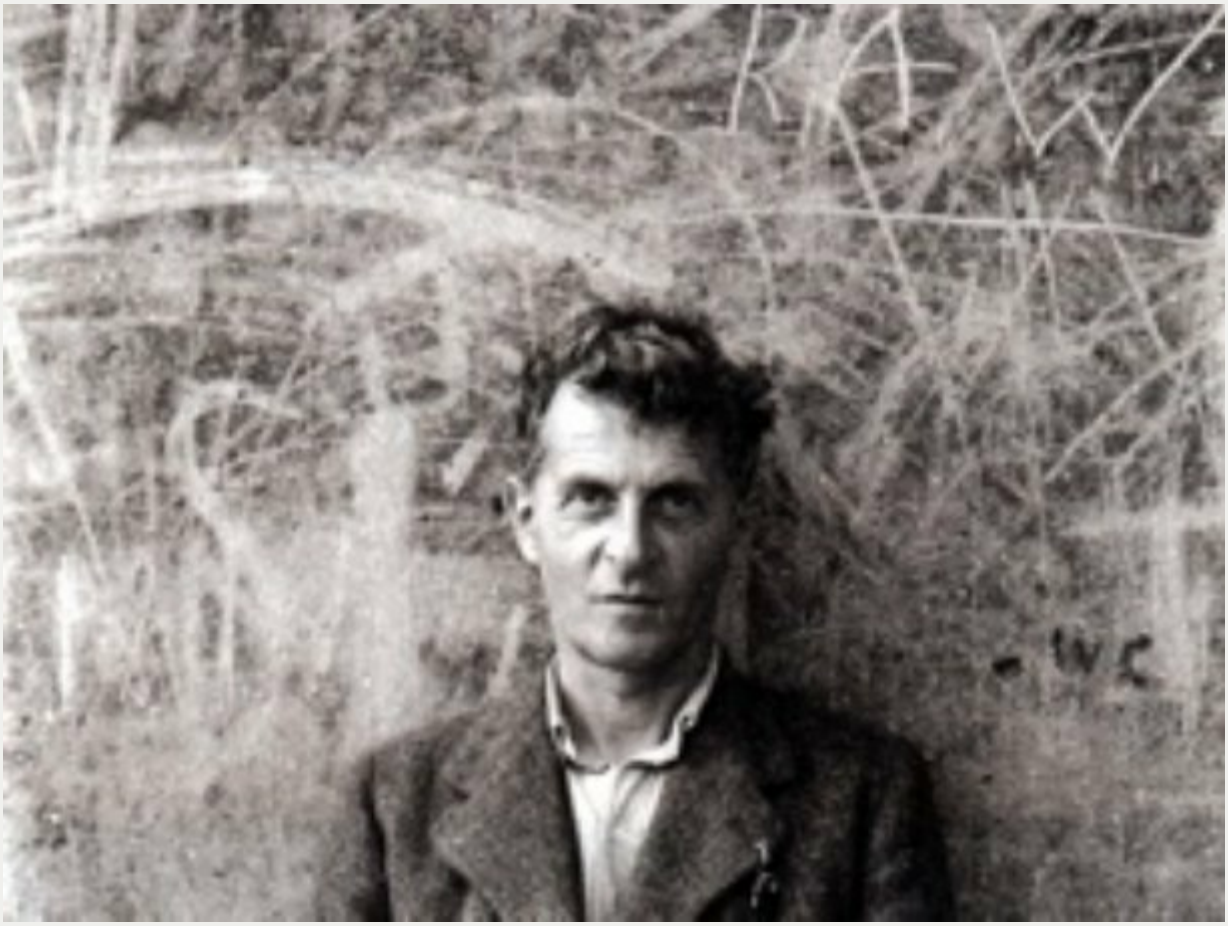
Galileo Galilei - Italian physicist, Mathematician, engineer, astronomer, phiosopher. He enhanced the potential of the telescope and propounded an outlandish theory that the Earth was a sphere.

Ludwig Josef Johann Wittgenstein – Austrian-born English philosopher. Widely regarded as the greatest phiosopher of the twentieth century. He inspired philosophers, playwrites, artists, poets, novelists and musicians.



Blaize Pascal – French Mathematician, physicist and religious philosopher. He gave the world many mathematical principles including the theory of probabilities. In his time he was a true trail blazer, advocating a unified religion whereby humanity would worship God with their hearts and not through dogma.

The Human Goat

There have been a number of individuals that seem to be able to digest almost anything from nails to light bulbs. Michel Lotito is the creme de la creme of ‘anything ingesters’.

Michel Lotito's stomach lining appears twice as thick as normal.

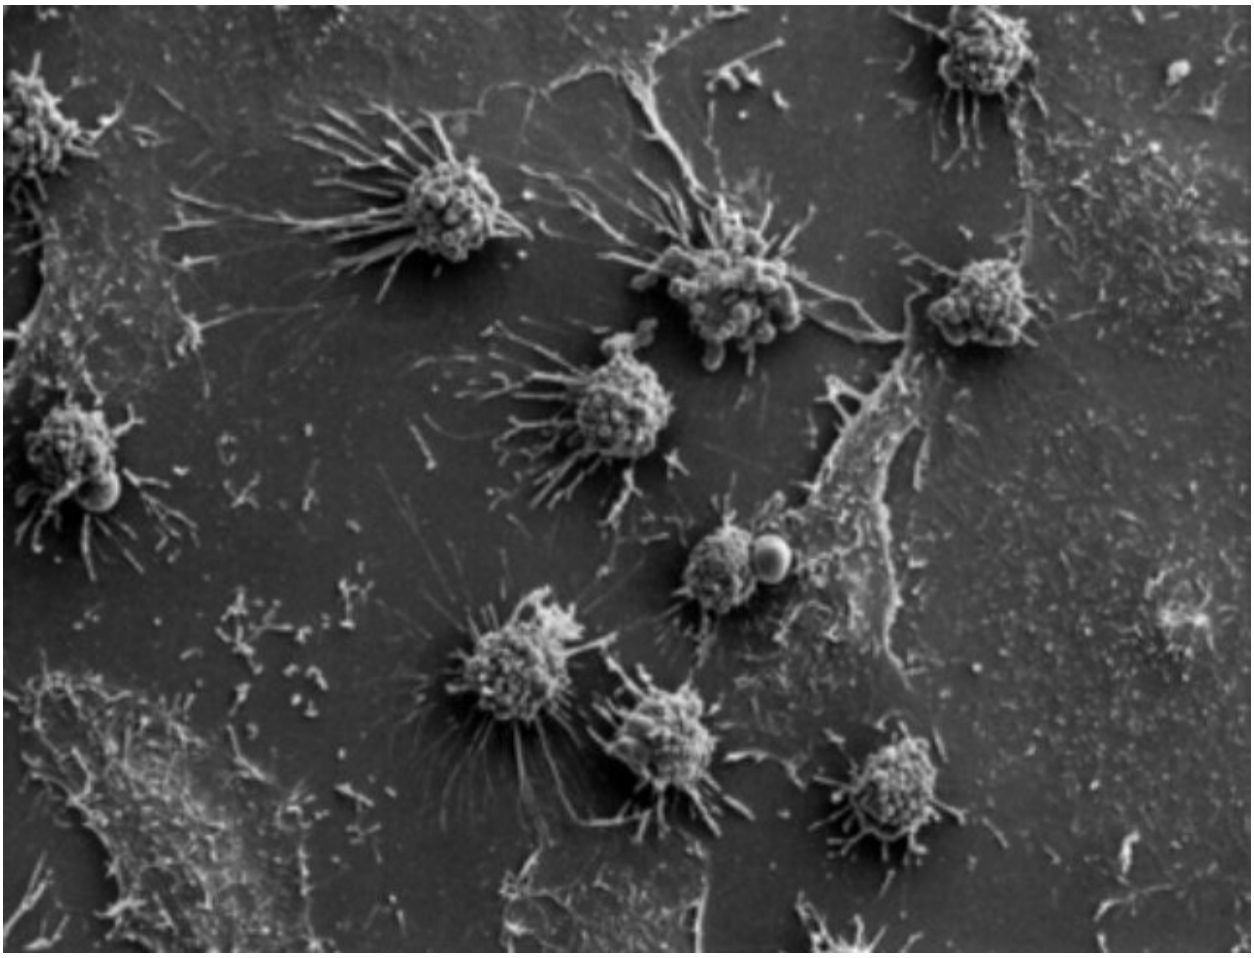
When he was 9-years-old he ate an entire television set.

Since then in front of many witnesses he has dismantled and digested bicycles, supermarket trolleys and disgustingly a coffin (sans corpse).

Perhaps the most amazing act of gluttony was the ingestion of an aeroplane. Of course this earned Michel a place in the Guinness Book of Records.

It took a total of two years (two pounds of metal per day) to almost completely digest the entire flying machine. X-rays show he still has pieces of metal in his digestive system including a chain.

Of all the possible superpowers which would you wish to possess? My vote goes to the following. I want to live forever and it seems that this lady is indeed immortal.



Thirty one year old Henrietta Lacks was diagnosed with cervical cancer in 1951. In 1952 she died of complications from the treatment and the advanced stage of the cancer.

Dr. George Gey obtained a histological sample from the tumour. Upon examining the cells he discovered that the cells did not divide in a normal manner but were actually immortal.

Working at John Hopkins University Dr. Gey reproduced these invaluable cells, naming them the HeLa cell.

How are human cells able to defy ageing? The HeLa cells have an active version of telomerase enzyme. Normally telomerase provides the mechanism of growing older by invoking a ‘shelf life’ on bodily cells. In this case the ‘ageing mechanism’ is switched off.

Despite claims that the new wonder cells would mean an end to cancers and all disease, including the ageing process the human race has not seen even a wink of this fantastic discovery. Why? Because the Illuminati elite want it all for themselves.
